Guided Learning Hours (GLH)

Note: for details, please see the policy on “Guided Learning Hours (GLH)”

Generally indicates the time a learner is being taught, instructed or participating in education or training under guidance or supervision of a tutor, lecturer etc (this can also include assessment time).

Getting credit: how much time should you spend studying?

Each module that you study during your time at university has a certain number of credit points attached to it, either 15, 30, 45 or 60. These are not just random numbers. They have a specific meaning in terms of how much time you should spend working on the module:

1 credit = 10 hours of study

So, a 15 credit module is expected to involve 150 hours of study, a 30 credit module is 300 hours, a 45 credit module is 450 hours, a 60 credit module is 600 hours. Most undergraduate modules are either 15 or 30 credits.

At Level 4 & Level 5, a typical pattern of study on a single semester module (15 credits) might look like this:

- taught study: 30 hours (roughly 2–3 hours a week)
- self-managed directed study: 70 hours, including around 40 hours working on assessment tasks (roughly 4–5 hours a week)
- self-managed independent study: 50 hours (roughly 3–4 hours a week)

This means, of course, that the bulk of your learning experience on this module (120 out of 150 hours) is self-managed. Although 70 hours is concerned with completing tasks set by tutors, it will be your responsibility to manage and complete these. An even greater challenge, of course, is the 50 hours which are designated as self-managed independent study.
